Story Summary and Storyboard

Initially, a modeler was sculpting characters on a computer when the software crashed and he angrily left.

Then the scene moves to the computer, where the characters he sculpts are unhappy with their own image and start robbing other models of muscles, hair, and weapons to make themselves more desirable.

Finally, he met a most original model, the original model failed to persuade him, the model began to use the paintbrush to carve some tattoos for themselves, but the mistake of the arm dug a hole, panic and will drop the eyeball kicked away, after he chased out the computer screen, only the original model left in place.

At this time, the modeler came back to restart the computer, and found that the software after the crash only left the original model he created half a month ago, and furious again.
